Introduction

Let me start by saying what this guide is not. It is not:

- * A list of “get rich quick” schemes
- * A guide to participating in pyramid schemes
- * A list of multi-level marketing schemes
- * A list of business opportunities
- * A guide for creating a successful business in the long term
- * An attempt to get you to sell my products as an affiliate

That’s right: unlike virtually all of the other guides you’ll find on the Internet about making money fast, this one won’t tell you to do it through questionable, unreasonable strategies; or through a business opportunity that will incur a loss in the short run.

In fact, this guide is the opposite of that. It focuses on how you can make money in the short run--legally, and by using reasonable, easy-to-follow methods. It won’t tell you to incur losses, to make large investments up front, or to be patient.

This guide is designed for people like you: people who need money now; and can’t wait for some business opportunity to work itself out.

With that said, let’s get into the substantive content. In the next 21 mini-chapters, I’m going to tell you how you can make money online and offline in a short amount of time and without risking any large investments in the process.

Method #1: Hold a Firesale

If you've been involved in Internet business for several years, you've probably seen your fair share of firesales. Some companies do it before going out of business; while others do it as a part of their normal sales cycle.

If you're in a bind and need some cash fast, then holding a firesale is probably one of your best options. Of course, if it were easy or obvious how to do this, then everyone would do it successfully; and there would be no need for a guide such as this one. But this isn't the case. Here's what I personally suggest you do to ensure that your firesale is successful:

Step #1: Pick a Demographic Before You Start

Before you even begin, it's a good idea to pick a demographic to sell to. If you don't know who your target audience is before you get started, then it will be impossible for you to select the right things to sell to them; and it will also be impossible for you to pitch to them in a relatable way.

Step #2: Develop a Truly Attractive Firesale Package

If you currently have a large product line, then this stage shouldn't be terribly challenging for you. All you'll have to do is select a handful of your products, bundle them together, and then sell them for a fraction of the normal cost.

On the other hand, if you don't have your own product line, then this part could be a little more challenging. You'll have to actively seek out products that offer some type of resale license, bundle them together, and then sell them at a tiny fraction of the normal combined price.

Step #3: Compute the Savings

Once you've assembled a large package of goods and have selected the firesale price, spend some time to determine how much it would cost an individual buyer to assemble all of these products (with normal—not resale—licenses). You can then present this figure repeatedly in all of your advertisements.
